 Topic: Indian Economy

India's economy is described as huge, complex and growing. It is one of the most exciting and emerging markets in the world. Since 1951, India has grown as a planned economy. The first few plans focused on growth with the strengthening of the manufacturing sector, emphasizing heavy industries to form the backbone of the economy. Other principal areas of planning were agriculture and social development. During the post-independence period and the period of the "five-year plans", efforts were focused on identifying the needs of the economy. Further, the economic reforms in the early 90s opened a new chapter in India's economic history. It gave India an opportunity to shake off the shackles of its past and emerge on the world stage as a progressive nation. This on the Indian economy will help students know about the Indian economy in detail. It will help them to improve their writing skills and also increase their scores on the than 70% of India's population depended on agriculture to earn a livelihood. Accordingly, the share of agriculture in the national product/income was as high as 56.6% in 1950-51. However, with the development of industries and the service sector, the percentage of the population depending on agriculture, as well as the share of agriculture in the national product, has come down. Agriculture is the source of food supply. Agriculture is also a major source of foreign exchange earning through export. The share of agriculture in India's export in the year 2011-12 was 12.3%. The major items of export include tea, sugar, tobacco, spices, cotton, rice, fruits, and vegetables, etc.

Industry is the secondary sector of the economy and is another important area of economic activity. After independence, the government of India emphasized the role of industrialisation in the country's economic development. In the long run, initially, the public sector contributed the maximum to economic growth. In the

Essay on Mental Health

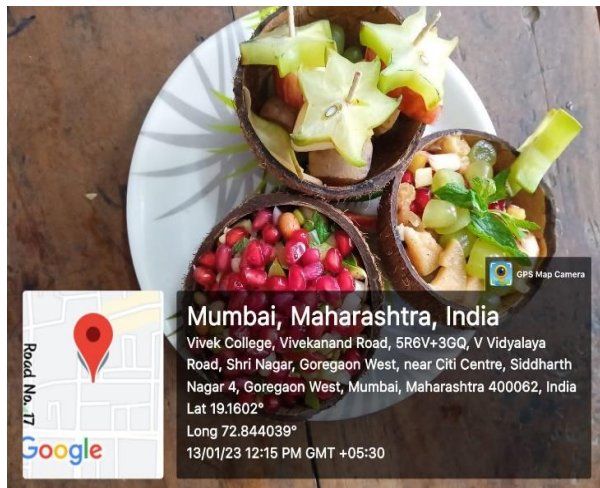

Mental Health refers to a person's psychological, emotional, and social well-being. It influences what they feel & how they think and behave. The state of ~~long~~ cognitive & behavioural well-being is referred to as mental health. The term mental health is also used to refer to the absence of mental disease.

Mental Health means keeping one's mind healthy. mankind generally is more focused on keeping their physical body healthy. People tend to ignore the state of their minds. Man has been able to control life due to his highly developed brain. So it becomes very important for a man to keep both his body & mind fit & healthy. Both physical & mental health are equally important for better performance & results.

The way we physically feel sick we can also feel sick mentally. Mental stress is the irritability of one's health which includes changes in emotions, thinking & behaviour. Mental illness can be caused due to stress or reaction to be a certain incident. It could also arise due to genetic factors, biochemical imbalances, child abuse or
